This course is an on-line course.

On-line students are required to enter and complete a reading assignment, review of a module or exercise and/or final weekly throughout the semester.

Course description:

DESCRIPTION: This course examines the foundational concepts of occupational health and safety as it relates to emergency service organizations. Sessions include risk evaluation procedures for fire stations, training sites, emergency vehicles, and emergency situations involving fire, EMS, hazardous materials, and technical rescues. After completion of this course, students will be able to establish and manage a safety program for an emergency service organization.

This is an On-line course using the etudes system designed to bring to you the opportunity to take college courses and conduct your studies around your own personal schedule. This course is one of the 6 core required courses for the fire technology program. The goals and objectives for the course as well as the course content has been approved state-wide for fire fighters by the California State College chancellor's Office; the California State fire Marshal as well as the National Fire Higher Education Committee.

Course Learning Outcomes:

1. Demonstrate the ability to recall the fire loss history in the United States and the application of these tragedies to the implementation of fire codes and fire fighting procedures.
2. Explain the fire and safety hazards one might find in a large industrial manufacturing firm.
3. Describe the purposes of fire prevention and safety codes and laws.
4. Explain the application of CAL OSHA safety standards to fire fighting.
5. Describe the requirements for safety in fire stations, personal safety equipment and e West Los Angeles College
