

Student Discipline Handbook for Faculty

INTRODUCTION

To achieve the college's mission of educating students, we must first create a positive learning environment. It is our responsibility to insure that our students know what is expected of them, and equally our responsibility to protect them and ourselves from behaviors that disrupt the integrity of that environment.

The purpose of the Los Angeles Community College District (LACCD) Student Conduct is to communicate the expectations that LACCD has of students, to educate guide students to understand their responsibility for appropriate behavior and respect for others in the LACCD community. Specifically, West Los Angeles College (WLAC) is dedicated to the advancement of learning, student retention success the development of responsible personal and social conduct. The maintenance of discipline in the WLAC setting is intended to support a civil environment conducive to learning and inquiry. Student Services staff members work in partnership with instructors and academic administrators to support this goal. A student enrolling in one of the colleges of the Los Angeles Community College District may rightfully expect that the faculty and administration maintain an environment in which there is freedom to learn. This requires that there be appropriate conditions and opportunities in the classroom and on the campus. As members of the college community, students should be encouraged to develop the capacity for critical judgment; to engage in sustained and independent search for truth; and to exercise their right to free inquiry and free speech in a responsible, non-violent manner. In furtherance of the student's interest in free inquiry and the search for truth, it is also important that students be able to hear the views of non-students and engage in the free exchange of ideas with non-students.

All persons shall respect and obey civil and criminal laws, and shall be subject to legal penalties for violation of laws of the city, county, state and nation. All persons shall respect and obey the rules, regulations, and policies of the Los Angeles Community College District. A record will be kept of all persons who use; the facilities or grounds of the college.

LOS ANGELES COMMUNITY COLLEGE DISTRICT STUDENT CODE OF CONDUCT

The Los Angeles Community College District faculty, staff and administration are dedicated to maintaining an optimal learning environment; the standards of behavior as outlined in Board Rule 9803 are essential to the maintenance of a quality college environment. These standards apply to all students on campus or other college property or while attending any college-sponsored classes, activities or events. Violation of such laws, policies, rules and regulations or behavior adversely affecting suitability as a student, will lead to disciplinary action.

Select forms of disciplinary action appropriate to the misconduct, as defined by the violation of the Standards of Student Conduct, Board Rule 9803, may be taken by an instructor. More severe disciplinary action must be instituted by the Vice President of Student Services or College Disciplinarian.

Notifying Campus Law Enforcement.

When a violation of the Standards of Student Conduct occurs which threatens the lives, property or maintenance of order, campus law enforcement should be notified immediately. Campus law enforcement will issue a police report and will send a copy to the Vice President of Student Services or designee for appropriate action.

The reprimand will be sent to the student by the Vice President of Student Services or designee, noting that continued violations may result in further disciplinary action. The Vice President of Student Services or designee shall place a copy of this reprimand in the student file.

The lower portion of that form is to be given to the student if at all possible, signed by him/her or not.

WHAT IS DISRUPTIVE BEHAVIOR

Any behavior which interferes with the instructional, administrative or service functions of the College is considered to be disruptive behavior. If the behavior threatens the personal safety of students, faculty or staff, or is displayed with such emotional intensity that it engenders fear or concern in others, please contact the Sheriff's Office at (310) 287-4314.

Disruptive behavior should not be confused with the students' right to express differing opinions and their exercise of fundamental academic freedoms. Assessing disruptive behavior can be highly subjective.

Each person has his/her tolerance level and strategies for handling disruptions. One must take into consideration the severity of disruption, as well as the number of times that a student has been counseled or disciplined for the same behavior.

To identify disruptive behavior in the classroom, instructors should consider the impact the disruption has on his/her ability to teach and maintain order in the classroom or online, as well as the impact of the behavior on other students. In addition, instructors should be sensitive to the cues exhibited by the class since an instructor's level of tolerance for certain disruptive behaviors may be greater than that of some students.

PREVENTION

It is highly recommended that the course syllabus outline the standards of conduct expected in the course and that these behavioral expectations be reviewed with the class. Examples of unacceptable behavior may include:

- Cheating; plagiarism
- Use of profanity
- Verbal and non-verbal disruptions
- Private conversations or displays of affection
- Uncooperativeness
- Cell phones and/or other personal electronic equipment
- Physical threats/violence

Additional examples of unacceptable behavior in online courses may include:

- Use of disrespectful or offensive language
- Posting of messages with inappropriate and/or offensive subjects
- Intimidation or harassment that creates a hostile environment for others

Recommended Actions

Depending on the severity of the disruption, an instructor may first ask the student to simply discontinue the behavior. A verbal and/or written warning may also be given as appropriate. The instructor should document details regarding the behavior and the response to the student. If additional action is deemed necessary, the instructor should report the incident to the Vice President of Student Services or the Dean of Student Services to determine the next course of action.

In the event of severe cases of disruptive behavior, the instructor has the right to suspend a student from class on the day of the offense and for the following class period (if necessary). If this should occur:

1. Consult with the Department Chair and Department Dean to notify them of the situation within one instructional day of the incident)
2. Submit a written description of the incident/situation to the Department Chair, Department Dean, Dean of Student Services, and Vice President Student Services
3. Contact the Dean of Student Services or Vice President Student Services to determine the next course of action.

HOW TO ASSIST STUDENTS IN CRISIS

Students encounter stress for a variety of reasons. Academics, family problems, social situations, work, and financial concerns are just some of the sources of stress. While most students cope successfully with the demands of college life, for some the pressures become overwhelming and unmanageable.

The inability to cope effectively with emotional stress poses a serious threat to a student's overall functioning. The expression of interest and concern by a faculty or staff member may be a critical factor in helping a struggling student reestablish the emotional equilibrium necessary for success in a university environment.

Your willingness to respond to students in distress will undoubtedly be influenced by your personal style and your particular beliefs about the limits of responsibility for helping students mature, both emotionally and intellectually. Some students may be more open to assistance than others. In addition, factors such as class size or the nature of your relationship with the student may also have a substantial effect on the type of interactions you have. It's important to be realistic about what you can offer when making a decision about how you can help a student.

A crisis is a situation in which an individual's usual style of coping is no longer effective, and the emotional or physiological response begins to escalate. As emotions intensify, coping becomes less effective, until the person may become disoriented, non-functional, or attempt harm. If a student is in a serious mental health crisis, you might see or hear the following:

- Suicidal statements or suicide attempts
- Written or verbal threats, or attempted homicide or assault
- Destruction of property or other criminal acts
- Extreme anxiety resulting in panic reactions
- Inability to communicate (e.g., garbled or slurred speech, disjointed thoughts)
- Loss of contact with reality (e.g., seeing or hearing things that aren't there, expressing beliefs or actions at odds with reality)
- Highly disruptive behavior (e.g., hostility, aggression, violence)

Stress is a part of every student's life

However, there are some indicators that, when present over time, suggest that a student's stress level may be a cause for concern. In these circumstances, you might see or hear the following:

- Uncharacteristic changes in academic performance
- Uncharacteristic changes in attendance at class or meetings
- Depressed or lethargic mood
- Hyperactivity and/or rapid speech
- Social withdrawal
- Marked change in personal dress, hygiene, eating and/or sleeping routines
- Repeatedly falling asleep in class
- Requests for special consideration, especially if the student is uncomfortable talking about the circumstances prompting the request
- New or recurrent behavior that pushes the limits of decorum and that interferes with the effective management of your class, work team, etc.
- Unusual or exaggerated emotional response to events

What To Do When You Suspect a Serious Crisis

If you believe there may be imminent danger of harm to a student or someone else, as evidenced by several of the crisis symptoms listed under the Student in Crisis Section, immediately call the Campus Sheriff's Department at (310) 287-4314. You may also consider walking the student to the Student Health Center. Doing so is an excellent way of showing your concern and support, and helps ensure that the student receives the help they need.

If you choose to approach a student you are concerned about or if a student seeks you out, here are some suggestions that might be helpful:

- Talk to the student in private when both of you have time and are not rushed or preoccupied. Give the student your undivided attention. It is possible that just a few minutes of effective listening on your part may be enough to help the student feel comfortable about what to do next.
- Be direct and nonjudgmental. Be direct and specific. Express your concern in behavioral, nonjudgmental terms. For example, say something like “I’ve noticed you’ve been absent from class lately, and I’m concerned,” rather than “Why have you missed so much class lately?”
- Listen sensitively. Listen to thoughts and feelings in a sensitive, non-threatening way. Communicate understanding by repeating back the essence of what the student has told you. Try to include both the content and feelings. For example, “It sounds like you’re not accustomed to such a big campus and you’re feeling left out of things.” Remember to let the student talk.

- Refer. Point out that help is available, and emphasize that seeking help is a sign of strength. Make some suggestions about places to go for help. Tell the student what you know about the recommended person or service.
- Follow up. Following up is an important part of the process. Check with the student later to find out how he or she is doing, and provide support as appropriate.

Dealing with students in distress can be a stressful and taxing experience. Be sure to take care of yourself, too. Seek support from colleagues and supervisors. It may also be helpful to talk with a counselor.
